UNO Coach Rose Shires is enjoying her first season in the top 20 as head coach. The Lady Mavs will travel to Greeley, Colo. for the Northern Premier tournament this weekend.

Top 20

By Kim Despina

The UNO Lady Mavs enter this weekend's Northern Premier tournament in Greeley, Colo., with a No. 13 ranking in NCAA Division II and just the right dose of confidence.

The Lady Mavs, 10-1, kick off North Central Conference (NCC) play against fifth-ranked Northern Colorado Thursday.

"I feel we're going to match up well with Northern Colorado," UNO Coach Rose Shires said. "It's just going to come down to who can control the ball better and who can stay involved mentally in the match better."

Among the other teams in the Northern Premier are Sonoma State, Denver University, Angelo State, Mankato State and the University of Nebraska at Kearney.

"There are going to be some reputable opponents," Shires said. "Unless we play to our capabilities, we have a chance of getting beat."

Shires said she isn't counting on junior

Sell appointed to financial aid position

By Tim Rohwer

Randall Sell, UNO manager of student accounts, was selected Tuesday as the new director of the Financial Aid Office.

He will assume the post on Oct. 5, said Don Skeahan, assistant vice chancellor of educational and student services, who selected Sell from about 52 applicants.

Sell replaces Phil Shreves, who resigned in May to assume a similar position at Central Missouri State University at Warrensburg.

Among its duties, the Financial Aid Office processes various types of loans and grants for students.

Skeahan said he selected Sell, who has been manager of student accounts for about five years, because of his familiarity with UNO's financial aid operations.

"He's very familiar with our student information systems and the Perkins Loans, which are a particular type of student loan," Skeahan said.

"He simply understands our operation from a management's point of view. What's more, Mr. Sell has excellent managerial and people skills."

Sell will oversee a department with six professional personnel and nine clerical personnel. He fills a position that has been without a permanent director during one of the busiest periods of the year for that office, Skeahan said.

Skeahan and Sheri Croghan, associate director of the Financial Aid Office, have been the interim directors since Shreves' resignation.

"It's been hectic," Skeahan said. "The Financial Aid Office is a little different than other offices. You just can't step in there and expect to know everything right away. There's a tremendous learning curve. We've been in a catch-up mode, but not because of a lack of effort on that staff."

Skeahan said the office has processed all the loans for those students who applied early.

"Right now, we're working on those loans that were applied around Aug. 1, which is considered late application," he said.

Sell was out of town and unavailable for comment.

Schulz advertises AMS post

By Kim Balkovec

A new director for the American Multicultural Students (AMS) agency is expected to be named by mid-October, according to Matt Schulz, chief administrative officer (CAO) of Student Government.

The AMS is without a director following the resignation of Marketa Edwards from that post last week.

Schulz said two students have already applied for the position, and he has taken out an advertisement in the Gateway concerning the vacancy.

Among his duties as CAO, Schulz is responsible for hiring all student agency directors, he said.

"Two students from the African American Organization (AAO) who I think are highly qualified have applied, but I also put an ad in Friday's Gateway so that interested students from the general student body can apply," Schulz said. "I'll wait a few days and see what kind of response I get and then start the interviewing process."

Schulz said he is unsure if there is enough time to have a new director recommended for the Student Senate's approval when it holds its next meeting Oct. 1.

"It would be nice, but I somewhat doubt it. Definitely, I should have someone ready for approval by the end of the current Senate session on Oct. 15," he said.

The AMS oversees three student organizations, the AAO, the Native American Student Association and the Hispanic

Student Organization. The presidents of those organizations as well as Amy Bellows, UNO advisor of student agencies, are expected to take part in the interviewing process, Schulz said.

"I want the three presidents and Amy Bellows to agree on my selection because they will have to work closely with that person," he said. "If they don't agree with my choice, then I will suggest someone else."

Schulz added he wants to spend more time interviewing the applicants for the position than when he hired Edwards last spring.

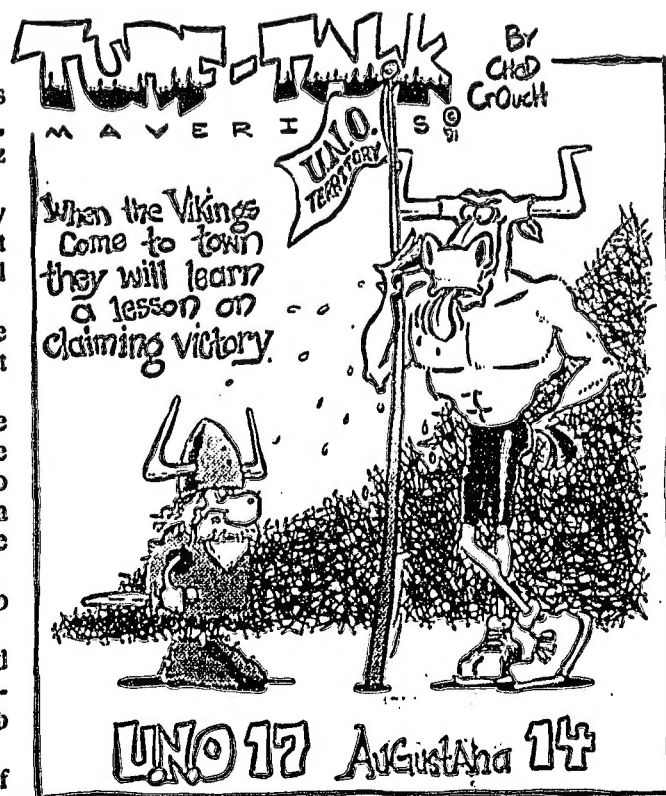

"I admit I was a little rushed to fill the post. That's because the agency needed to present its budget request before the Student Activities Budget Commission (SABC) in just two weeks, so I needed to fill it quickly. I certainly thought Marketa was well-qualified and the three presidents also liked her," he said.

During the interview process, Schulz said he is going to stress the particular duties of the director.

Edwards said at last week's Senate meeting that she received conflicting views from the administration, Student Government and the three organizations under AMS as to what her job description involved.

"I'll probably stress a little more to the applicants that if they're unclear of their duties they should first go to Amy

Facts about Republican platform inaccurate

Dear Editor:

It is unfortunate that J. Huelskamp's letter (Gateway, Sept. 18) committed the very errors she accuses Stephen McIntyre of making. McIntyre was far more accurate in his depiction of the long-term, Republican Party leadership position regarding abortion than Ms. Huelskamp. I asked myself why she would want to print such inaccurate information and my only conclusion was that she was terribly uninformed on the subject.

For the record, when we speak of the Republican Party position regarding abortion, we can rely on both the party platform and the statements of President Bush and Vice President Quayle.

The party platform in 1992, for the first time, called for a constitutional amendment banning abortion — even in cases of rape and incest. So much for Ms. Huelskamp's claim that they support such exceptions.

It is one thing to say that such exceptions are allowable under present law — that in no way means that the Republican Party supports the idea. Under the abortion ban sought by the GOP, abortions are allowed only when the life or health of the mother is threatened. This would not include instances where the child would be born deformed or with a terminal illness.

More informed readers will also recall that in 1988, Bush favored exceptions in the case of rape and incest, while Quayle did not. Apparently, Bush continues to move away from his pro-choice decision of 1980, to the point where he does not even approve of these two exceptions anymore. I guess courting religious right is more important to him in 1992 than it was in 1988.

Finally, remember that earlier this year Bush made statements to the effect that, if his daughter had decided to obtain an abortion, he would reluctantly but fully support her decision. That is great news so long as the daughter would still have the choice. If the Republican Party was to succeed in its long-stated position of passing a constitutional amendment to ban abortions, then both Bush and Quayle would have no need to approve of her decision, unless she decided to have an illegal abortion.

Many objections can be made in response to McIntyre's examples and arguments. Nevertheless, your outright distortion of what are commonly known facts does little to further debate or enhance voter decision making. As the Democrats say, talk about the real record, Huelskamp.

Greek favoritism not behind removal vote

Dear Editor:

I am writing in response to a letter from Mike McKenna (Gateway, Sept. 22). I want to give the students the full facts rather than have them acting solely on the half-truths offered by McKenna. He is correct in saying that three student senators were brought up for removal for absences at the Sept. 17 Senate meeting. None of them were removed.

Why was this? McKenna would have the students believe it was out of favoritism for Greek members of the Senate. I would ask him, how could this be, since only one of the three is a member of a fraternity (Sen. Mike Fingerlin)?

If the Senate is supposedly pro-Greek, why was former Sen. Wade Lewis (president of Pi Kappa Alpha) not reinstated at the Sept. 3 Senate meeting?

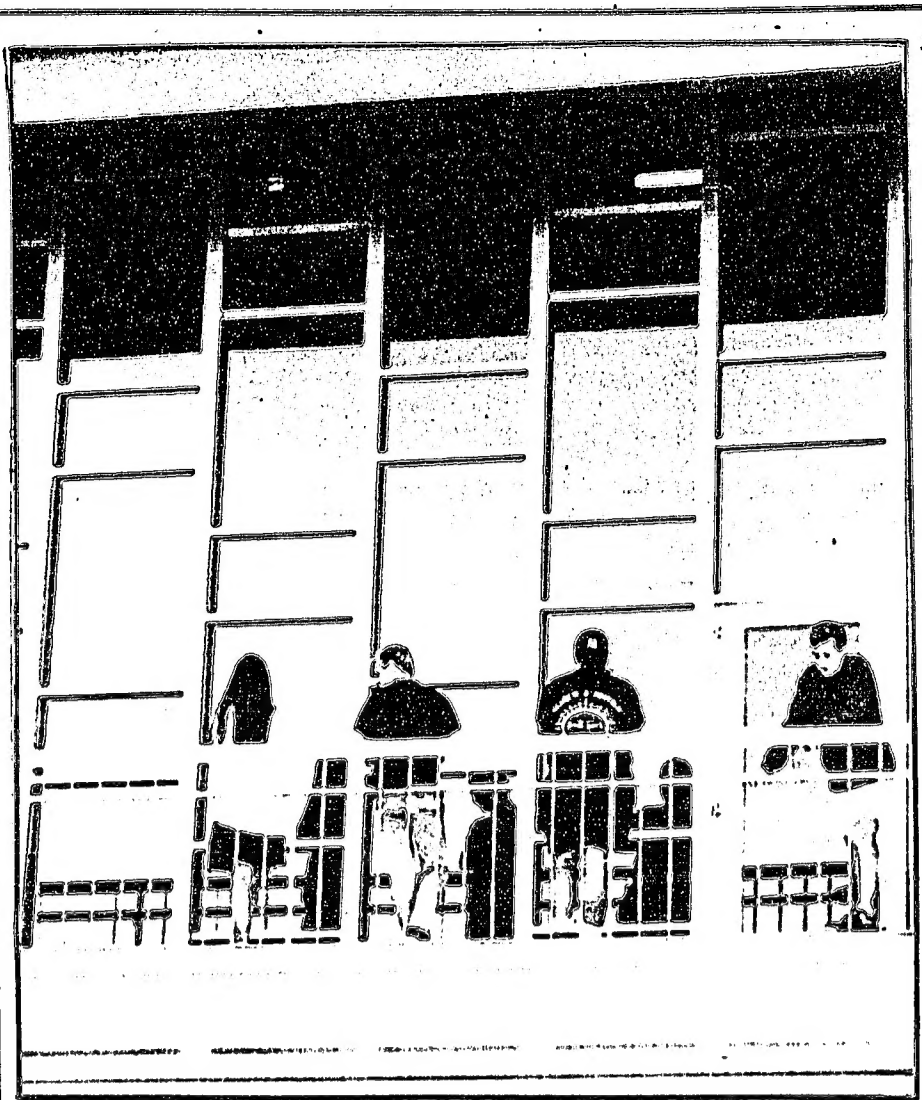

The attendance policy states that the speaker of the Senate must bring senators with three absences to the Senate for a vote on removal. I did that. The senators chose not to make the motion. That is their choice and this was not an unusual occurrence. The Senate has set a precedent of not removing those senators who attend the meeting at which they are being considered for removal to plead their case before the Senate votes. It is believed that of a senator cares enough to make the effort to stay on the Senate, he should be given a second chance. This usually works out well.

Some senators have classes which conflict with Senate meetings. Many of these senators try to be at every meeting possible, but have to miss some meetings when it is imperative that they be in class. This is a university, after all, and classes should take priority. This practice has not only been used by the 1991-92 Senate, but also by Senates of past years.

If people disagree with this, perhaps the attendance policy should be changed. Students should not, however, misjudge the motives of the Senate by the words of McKenna, who certainly has motive to try to cast the Senate in a bad light.

Vote, dammit

It seems like only yesterday. Applications were filed, flyers were disseminated and candidates were elected. And in just a few weeks, campaigns will begin again in the quest for a new Student Senate. Platforms will be built, and promises will be made, as in any election. Familiar issues will resurface. A resurgence in interest in dorms and added parking will keep the candidates talking until the final vote is cast and a new Senate is elected that will do as much about the issues as their predecessors. What was done about parking? Last Spring, the Senate introduced a plan to alleviate the parking problem by requiring freshmen to park at Ak-Sar-Ben. Although the idea was never pushed forward, it was, at least, an effort. And what about dorms? Dormitories at UNO are still a plan of the future, as outlined in the Master Plan, which calls for continued expansion and growth to the campus. UNO is rapidly changing, but some things never change.

Student apathy is still very much alive at UNO. With every election, about one or two thousand students out of 17,000 decide who will represent the student body for a year. With a 10 percent voter turnout, it is ironic that so many students complain about dorms in the first place. Would just 10 percent of the student body live in UNO's dorms? If so, there would be plenty of storage space in the vacancies. Those who complain about the ineffectiveness and complacency of the Senate should first examine their own complacency. By taking some initiative and getting involved, complaint can evolve into action. But then again, it is just as easy to sit back and be cynical.

Abortion bill more harmful than helpful to women

Had the British essayist Joseph Addison been alive today, he may have added "politics" to his well-known statement: "Hypocrisy itself does great honor, or rather justice, to religion, and tacitly acknowledges it to be an ornament to human nature."

These days, he would have been more than right, noting the busybodies using politics to appease their religion. Of late, though, one political movement or rather one blatant hypocrisy, that calls itself "pro-life" has been pushed back a step.

The 5th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals in New Orleans declared Tuesday Louisiana's 1991 anti-abortion law unconstitutional, but not without a dissent from one of its own members — Judge Emilio M. Garza.

"Because the decision to permit or proscribe abortion is a political choice, I would allow the people of the state of Louisiana to decide this issue for themselves," Garza emphasized. Some of you may remember Garza from last year as one of several candidates chosen to replace the retired Thurgood Marshall. This slot was eventually filled by the techno-lynched Clarence Thomas. Apparently, Garza is still sore for being passed over by our pro-family president.

However, Garza finally conceded that the Supreme Court, no matter how "wrong" they may have been in their June 29 abortion ruling, is still the highest authority in interpreting law. So doing, he joined his fellow justices and threw out the latest attempt at controlling women's lives.

But the law didn't just aim at restricting what women can or cannot do to their bodies and/or the life inside them. To a very large aspect, the legislature and the pharisaical Puritans who elected them tried to create an environment dangerous to women who wanted to undergo an abortion. Let me give you some background.

On May 9, 1991, the Criminal Justice Committee of the Louisiana Legislature approved two bills that would limit a woman's access to abortion. The first bill allowed abortions only if the woman's life was in danger, and any physician performing an illegal abortion would face up to 15 years in prison.

The second measure would allow abortions in the cases of rape and incest during the first 13 weeks of the pregnancy and would also allow the procedure for life-threatening situations. A doctor caught violating this law would be sent to prison for 10 years of hard labor and pay fines between $10,000 and $100,000.

A month later on June 18, the Louisiana Senate voted 29-9 to uphold the second bill, overriding Gov. Buddy Roemer's veto of the legislation. The bill was later confirmed in the House by more than six votes. Yet, the battle had only begun.

On Aug. 7, 1991, Judge Adrian Duplantier of the U.S. District Court struck down Louisiana's anti-abortion law, albeit hesitantly. Duplantier disagreed with the Court's 1973

Roe vs. Wade ruling and would have permitted the state to enforce its hostile legislation. But like Garza, Duplantier found himself under the constraints of the Court's decision and thus ruled the measure unconstitutional.

Immediately after the resolution, Louisiana Attorney General William J. Guste petitioned the 5th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals and asked for an expedited review. The Attorney General's motion was not granted, which lands us back to where we are now.

There is one part of the anti-abortion bill I did not mention that should be stressed. This portion of the measure shows exactly how far the pro-lifers of our nation are willing to go to prove their sanctimonious pietism.

What is it, you ask? The bill, while banning most abortions and criminalizing the physicians who perform them, holds that women who have the abortions are exempt from prosecution. That is, if a woman were to have an abortion (thus "killing" the life within her), she would not be held liable for her actions. Rather, the doctor who performs the deed is the guilty party.

To put it in another way, to have an abortion in the pro-lifer's point of view is murder. Not mutilation, not assault, but murder. Anyone committing a murder is guilty of a crime against humanity and should be properly punished.

That is, if a person were to go out and take another's life away, they should receive fair judgment and quick justice. It shouldn't matter who the criminal is; all of them should be held accountable.

Also, any accomplice in the murder should be held and tried for the same crime. They were there, they didn't try to stop the killing. In fact, they took an active part in the action. Like the one who performed the atrocity, accomplices should be shut behind bars or worse.

So if abortion is murder, a bill restricting the procedure should reflect that. Anyone taking part in the abortion should be held liable, whether it's a doctor, a nurse or the woman getting the operation. Does the Louisiana anti-abortion bill state this?

No, of course not. The bill would have been beaten before it ever reached the floor for debate.

What the bill does, however, is make getting an abortion more unsafe than ever. The measure restricts doctors from performing abortions but does not hold back the woman from giving one to herself. The law makes it illegal for a doctor to perform a safe abortion. On the other hand, a woman who wants to take a risk and do the abortion on herself can — legally.

For now the pro-life movement has been slowed, but don't think for a moment that they're ready to quit fighting or that the measure they helped to pass in Louisiana is dead. Nevertheless, I do wish members of this group would get off their high mountain and stop trying to prove their virtue to their God and the rest of the world.

GNR rocks KC with riot-free concert

Guns 'N Roses and Metallica put their tour problems behind them on a recent stop in Kansas City.

The Gunners and Metallica each treated fans to riveting, two-hour performances Sept. 17 at Arrowhead Stadium.

Riots, postponements and shortened shows have plagued the GNR-Metallica tour this summer and left many fans wary of purchasing tickets.

But this time around, the concert lived up to its billing.

GNR made the hour wait between shows worth it by opening with an energetic rendition of "Welcome to the Jungle."

Axl Rose and the Gunners carried over that energy to their next three songs: "Mr. Brownstone," "Live and Let Die" and "Bad Obsession;" the latter two releases off "Use Your Illusion I."

Rose then took time out to criticize St. Louis city officials, who have levied assault charges against him for a riot in that city two years ago. If convicted in November, Rose could face five years in prison.

Rose dedicated two songs to the controversy: "Out to Get Me" and "Double Talkin' Jive," and again insisted that the review by jim anderson

on stage

riot was not the band's fault.

After "Double Talkin' Jive," a powerful, five-minute drum solo by Matt Sorum led the band into "You Could Be Mine," the first release off "Use Your Illusion II."

From there the Gunners picked it up even more with "Sweet Child o' Mine" and a stirring performance of their latest hit, "November Rain," a nine-minute ballad written by Rose, which featured a powerful guitar solo by Slash.

After rousing the crowd even further with the cover of Bob Dylan's "Knockin' on Heaven's Door," Rose threw his wireless microphone at least 100 feet into the audience. At that point, Kansas City officials had to be thankful that beer wasn't being sold at the concert.

The Gunners returned for an arousing encore of "Paradise City," before showing their appreciation to the fans on the floor by handing out roses.

Metallica gave their fans quite a show as well. The heavy metal rockers mixed the old with the new in a two-hour and 25-minute set.

Metallica got things cooking early with versions of "The Unforgiven" and "Wherever I May Roam."

"This is the second time I've been to see them," said Steve Woodson, of Raytown, Mo., "and they get better every time."

Metallica closed with several encores, the best being their final song, "Enter Sandman," the first release off "And Justice for All."

Body Count and Ice-T opened the seven and a half hour marathon with a 30-minute set, which included the controversial song "Cop Killer."

Although the bands gave the fans their money's worth, GNR and Metallica should split their tours. The concert lasts too long with gates opening at 2:30 p.m. and the first act going on at 4:30 p.m. Add in seven hours on the road from Omaha and back, and it makes for a long day.

Ramones make a few changes

"I feel like this is the best Ramones album ever," said vocalist Joey Ramone in a press release.

I won't go so far as to say the new CD is the best Ramones ever, but I'll gladly admit that it's a strong collection of new music. Quite basically, it's fast paced and psychoanalytic, just like the Ramones always have been.

Debuting with a new record label, the band has made a few changes. "Mondo Bizarro" marks the first studio appearance of bassist C.J. Ramone, who has been with the band since '89. It also features three songs co-written by former bassist Dee Dee Ramone, two of the songs which are sung by C.J.

Any Ramone's release is almost a sure thing on college radio, but with the strength of the first single "Poison Heart," it looks like the band will be back on top of the college charts.

"Censorshit" takes on Tipper Gore and the people behind the Parents' Music Resource Center. Joey Ramone suggests the senators' wives look at their own lives and the real pending national issues before they attempt to limit things such as music.

sound check

reviews by eric johnson

The rest of "Mondo Bizarro" is jam packed with great songs. Especially "It's Gonna Be Alright," which is a tribute to Ramones fans everywhere, and the Beatle-esque "I Won't Let It Happen." Ramones fans won't be able to put this CD away for weeks.

Ugly Kid Joe: "America's Least Wanted"

Since the smash of "Everything About You," the Ugly Kids have kept steamrolling along. Now they've unleashed their first full CD upon the masses.

"Everything About You" is included along with a slightly different version of "Madman." Then there's the current single, "Neighbor," that is a parody of American suburban life.

The big surprise is the appearance of songs like "Come Tomorrow." The band has taken a big jump forward, incorporating elements of soul and emotion instead of just crunching chords.

"Busy Bee" is the best example of an acoustic-based groove that feels small and personal. Then the electricity is turned on, creating a Black Crowes type groove. This, along with the Chili Pepper funk and unity of "Same Side," creates a new image of Ugly Kid Joe.

Don't worry too much. With a guest appearance by Rob Halford, the CD isn't tame for all that long. There's still plenty of hard edged, rhyme-laden rockers in this batch. Not quite as hard as the E.P., but heavy just the same.

Robert Cray: "I Was Warned"

It has been two years since the last Robert Cray release, but he's been very busy. He's been working with Eric Clapton's all-star band and playing both nights at the Guitar Legends concert in Seville, Spain, to name a couple of projects.

While "I Was Warned" is not a big departure from Cray's earlier work, he doesn't proclaim it to be blues.

The Ramones' latest release, "Mondo Bizarro," is a strong collection of new music.

—Denny Clinch

"Whenever anybody says we're just a blues band, I tell them to go back through all our records," the guitarist said.

The new CD uses elements of jazz, gospel and rock'n'roll. All of these elements are neatly tied together with Cray's impeccable soloing style.

The blues groover "Just A Loser" is currently climbing the charts. Other tracks to keep an ear open for are "I'm A Good Man" and the almost certain single "On the Road Down." This one is catchy musically, as well as lyrically.

The whole CD is just good music at a relaxed pace. The blues enthusiast as well as the guitar player will more than certainly enjoy "I Was Warned."

Gin Blossoms: "New Miserable Experience"

"It's like a big slice of American cheese," says vocalist Robin Wilson, describing the sound of the Gin Blossoms.

Hailing from Tempe, Ariz., the band has taken the long road, starting as a regional act and working their way up to "New

Rumpelstiltskin spins tale at children's theater

"Can I try on your rubber nose?" a child asks Elise Buchman in the question and answer period following the performance of "Rumpelstiltskin" at The Emmy Gifford Children's Theater.

Buchman, who plays the magical sprite Rumpelstiltskin, answers "no" with a smile, and she and the other actors field more questions from eager youngsters.

"Rumpelstiltskin," adapted by Bren Dubay, is the tale of a mischievous man who spins straw into gold for Mary Ann, a peasant girl. Mary Ann is held prisoner in the castle by King William and must spin gold from straw to save her father from being hanged.

review by chris almgren

As a price for spinning the gold, Mary Ann first gives Rumpelstiltskin her dead mother's necklace. The second time he spins gold for her, Mary Ann gives him her mother's ring. The last time, with nothing else to give, Mary Ann promises Rumpelstiltskin her first-born child should she and King William ever marry.

King William and Mary Ann do marry, and the only way Mary Ann can keep her child is to guess the little man's name. She has eight guesses. On the eighth try, she guesses the name of her long forgotten and imaginary childhood friend, Rumpelstiltskin. She is correct.

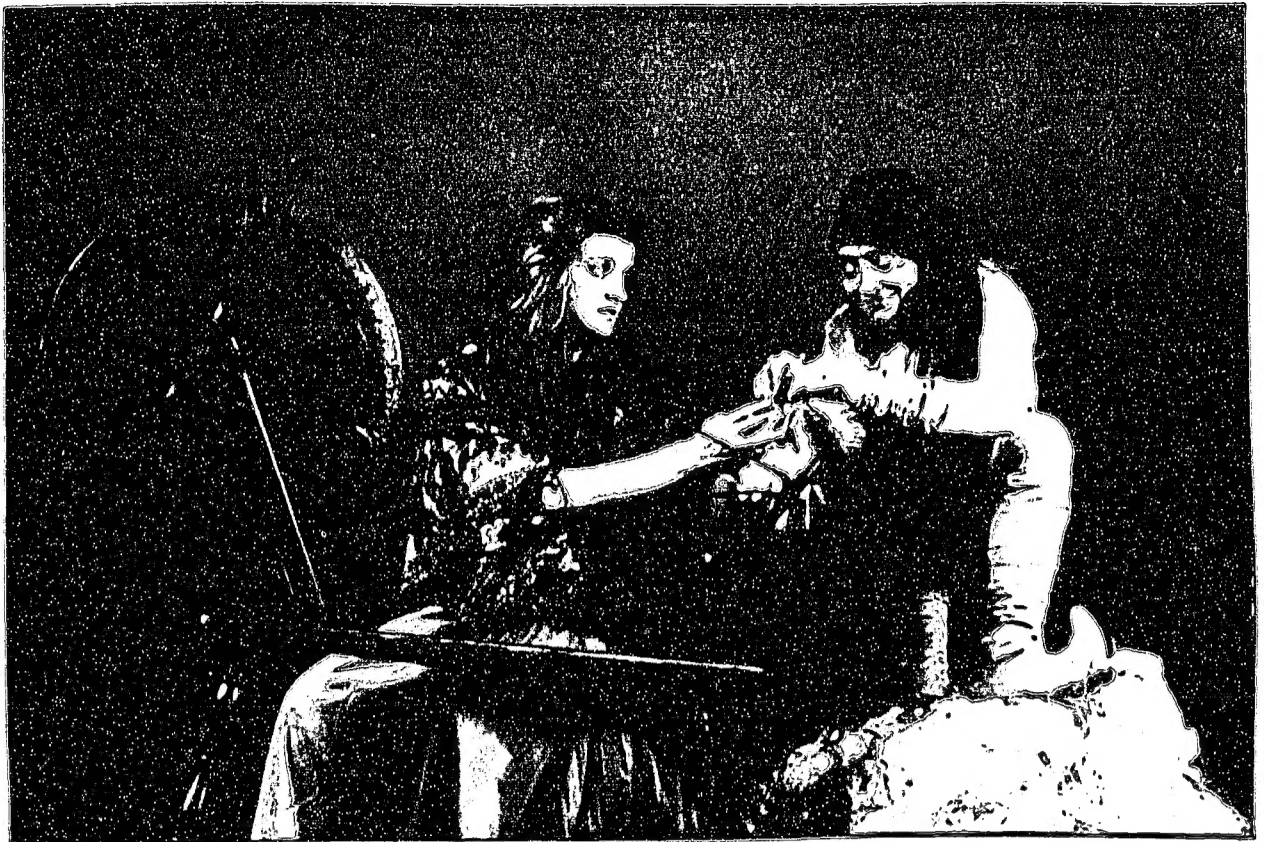

Buchman, a multi-faceted actor, breathes life into Rumpelstiltskin through simple acrobatics and energetic dialogue.

Tracy Iwersen-Biskup portrays Mary Ann with both compassion and an independent toughness.

Her father, the miller played by Kevin Ehrhart, is a dreamy fellow who doesn't want his daughter to work, for she is beautiful and "will marry a rich man."

Pam Carter plays Lady Mayor, a sharp, calculated and well-fed society lady. She constantly harasses the lazy miller for she "must have her bread."

King William, played by Kevin Barratt, describes himself as "a charming scoundrel" who falls in love with Mary Ann. She will have nothing to do with him, believing he likes her only because she can spin straw into gold.

Tracy Iwersen-Biskup plays Mary Ann, and Elise Buchman is Rumpelstiltskin in the Emmy Gifford Children's Theater's latest play "Rumpelstiltskin."

King William says otherwise.

The colorful revolving stage is impressive. One side serves as the peasant village and the actors physically move the stage around to reveal the castle. The rest of the set is kept simple, and the costumes are festive.

Prominent English director Tim Carroll directs "Rumpelstiltskin," which is sponsored by First National Bank, Cox Cable of Omaha and TCI Cable of the Midlands.

I, Madame Fedora, have been sought after all of my life. Many of my devoted servants merely seek my advice, which I am willing to give. It is my part in making this world a better place.

A few of these disciples have found my current locale and, once again, requested my assistance with their dreary mortal problems. Here is a sampling:

Dear Madame Fedora,

I hold a position of high authority, but no one respects me. It really bothers me when I see people on television, poking fun at me. One day, I'd like to advance in my field of expertise, but I feel that this, coupled with my inability to spell, is holding me back.

You say potato, I say potatoe.

Potatoe:

Get a clue and learn to spell, you worthless moron. I suggest you change professions and become a goat herder in Ireland. I once knew an Irish goat herder. We shared Irish whiskey and swapped tales about the famine in Ireland and of our mutual love for potatoes.

Dear Fedora,

I have a serious problem. I feel that my guts are rotting away inside of my body, and I can do nothing to stop it. I am deathly ill, but I don't want to die. I have so much to live for — a wonderful job, a few caring friends and a loving gerbil. What can I do?

Sincerely,

Dying Slowly

Dying:

Suck it up. No wonder you have so few friends, you whine too much. The only reason your gerbil likes you is because it's blind, deaf and stupid. Seek therapy — and a life.

Dearest Madame Fedora,

I have sought your wisdom throughout my lifetime. From the first moment I could walk, you have been my only quest. Now I lie on my deathbed, begging for just a glimpse of your infinite wisdom.

Forever your humble servant,

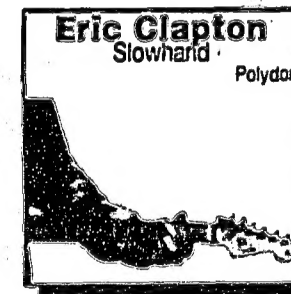

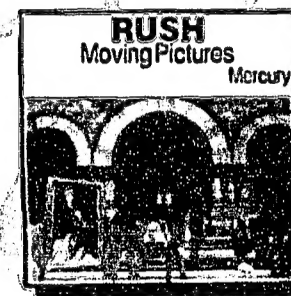

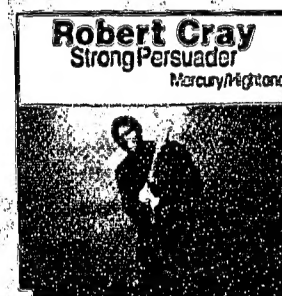

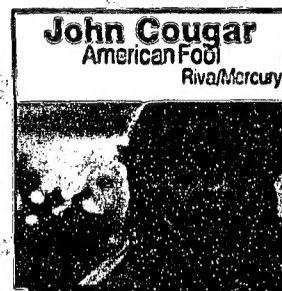

Alonzo

Al:

Too bad about your situation. Will me your bed after you die; mine's too damn hard. I will leave you with these words of wisdom and a glimpse into the future: Disco will return.

You too may write to me, seeking advice or expressing an opinion. I may answer your letter, if I feel it is worthy. Send your pitiful questions and requests to me in care of the Gateway at Annex 26.

'Sneakers' good despite faults

On a college campus in the 1960s, two students break into a computer system and transfer money from Richard Nixon's account to the Black Panthers. To celebrate their triumph, they flip a coin to see who will go out to obtain a pizza. After Martin Brice has left the building, his partner Cosmo is apprehended by the police while screaming Martin's name.

With this auditory bridge, Phil Alden Robinson's new film, "Sneakers," moves ahead about 30 years as we hear another colleague of Brice—now Martin Bishop (Robert Redford)—calling his name. It seems that Bishop has formed a group of technical wizards, "Sneakers," which assess security systems as their profession. He is being called to attention by compatriot Donald Crease (Sidney Poitier), a veteran of the CIA, as the group undertakes their latest caper.

review by elizabeth tape

With appropriate mystery, the film never quite allows us to be sure what Bishop and company are up to. We meet Bishop's assorted odd gathering of co-workers, including Darien Roskow (referred to as "Mother" and played by Dan Aykroyd), Carl Arbogast (River Phoenix), Irwin Emery (called "Whistler" and played by David Strathairn), all with some cryptic past. We also meet Bishop's one-time paramour Liz Ogilvy (Mary McDonnell), whom he broke up with some time ago.

As a "caper" film, "Sneakers" assuredly holds its audience's attention with a fascinating story, with inventive, high-tech devices that take the art of prowling about to new heights.

But "Sneakers" clearly strives to be a somewhat comedic look at this genre, often playing for laughs, as in the scene when Bishop is discovered stealing. Suddenly, "Sneakers" moves from the realm of adventure films to out-and-out comedy.

Despite generating a few grimaces, "Sneakers," overall, pleases. Anchored by a sweet performance by Redford, the film is supported also by the intensely evil presence of Ben Kingsley as Bishop's arch enemy Cosmo. Aykroyd, Poitier, Phoenix and Strathairn also do well in the roles as Bishop's loyal co-workers, working well together and effectively communicating a strong sense of camaraderie.

Miserable Experience," the band's first full-major label release. The effort is a collection of great pop songs that take on personalities of their own. While songs like "Hey Jealousy" and

"Hold Me Down" sound very similar, the lyrics are certainly two different stories.

This CD really cooks in the middle with "Hands Are Tied," "Found Out About You" and "Allison Road." Also included are the zydeco-based "Cajun Song" and the closer "Cheatin'."

Once this thing gets rolling, it's hard to turn it off. With enough time and exposure, the Gin Blossoms could easily crossover to mainstream radio nationwide. This is a must have for the guitar-based pop enthusiast.

Mavericks hope to run the ball against Vikings

By Lance Braun

The UNO Mavericks' football team hopes there's no place like home.

The Mavs hope to rebound from last week's 31-13 road loss to St. Cloud State when the Augustana Vikings visit Al Caniglia Field Saturday night.

Both teams enter the contest with 2-1 records overall and 0-1 in the North Central Conference.

"I felt we played very well in the first half (against St. Cloud State)," Mav Head Football Coach Tom Mueller said.

"We had several opportunities to fold and we didn't. I thought we played some pretty good physical football. But we had some lapses in the second half where we didn't block or tackle well. We just seemed to be lacking in concentration and discipline."

Mueller said his big concern for this week's game is the Mav rushing attack.

"Obviously, we want to run the ball better than we have been. That allows us to control the clock better, too. Last week, St. Cloud started at our 30-yard line on one drive, took 10 plays to score and ate over five minutes off the clock. That's the kind of thing we need to be able to do," he said.

While UNO was losing to St. Cloud State last weekend, Augustana was giving a scare to Division II's No. 5 ranked team, North Dakota State. The Vikings scored first but fell behind 21-7 after three periods. Augustana did score 10 fourth-quarter points, but could not pull off the upset.

"Augustana has played three very good football games this year," Mueller said. "They had the opportunity to beat North Dakota State.

They have a solid, well-coached defense, and their schemes on offense highlights their strengths well."

One of those strengths is sophomore quarterback Heath Rylance. Last season, Rylance completed 96 out of 177 passes for 1,100 yards and 10 touchdowns. Against UNO, he completed 20 of 29 passes for 199 yards and two scores.

"Our defense has to control Rylance. He is their trigger man," Mueller said.

Last year, UNO exploded to a 23-0 third-quarter lead over Augustana, then held off a furious fourth-quarter rally to steal a 26-18 victory from the Vikings in Sioux Falls, S.D.

Mav linebacker Kirk Peterson had a sack for a safety, running back Eric Hill scored on a 2-yard touchdown run, and quarterback Paul Cech hit wide receiver Deon Martin on a 5-yard touchdown pass as the Mavs took a 16-0 lead into halftime.

Hill scored his second touchdown on an 8-yard jaunt midway through the third period.

Augustana woke up on their next series as Rylance hit receiver Michael Dearing on a 45-yard touchdown strike to make the score 23-6.

UNO kicker Brian Ruch hit a 36-yard field goal, and the Mavs survived two fourth-quarter Viking touchdowns to preserve a 26-18 victory.

Kickoff for Saturday's game is 7 p.m.

Laura Monahan, whose father recently passed away.

"She's doing fine. She's still in Chicago," Shires said. "We're hoping she can meet us in Greeley this weekend to play. We'll see what she's like when she gets there. We're not counting on her 100 percent right now."

Monahan was selected Nebraska's NCAA Division II Player of the Week after she led the Lady Mavs to three victories in the Lewis Invitational.

The 5-foot-9 outside hitter from Lisle, Ill., had 39 kills and a .290 hitting percentage in three wins over St. Joseph's, Rollins College and Lewis University. She also had 39 digs and four service aces.

If Monahan is unable to play in this weekend's tournament, Shires said her replacement would be one of three freshmen: Stacy Haas, Stephanie Wischmeier or Denise Otten.

"All are very capable of performing, and all are definitely very capable of rising to the occasion," Shires said.

With four of the 10 NCC teams in the nation's 25, Shires said placing in the top three would be an impressive finish.

"We feel confident against teams in the conference," she said. "We feel that they're definitely going to be tough matches."

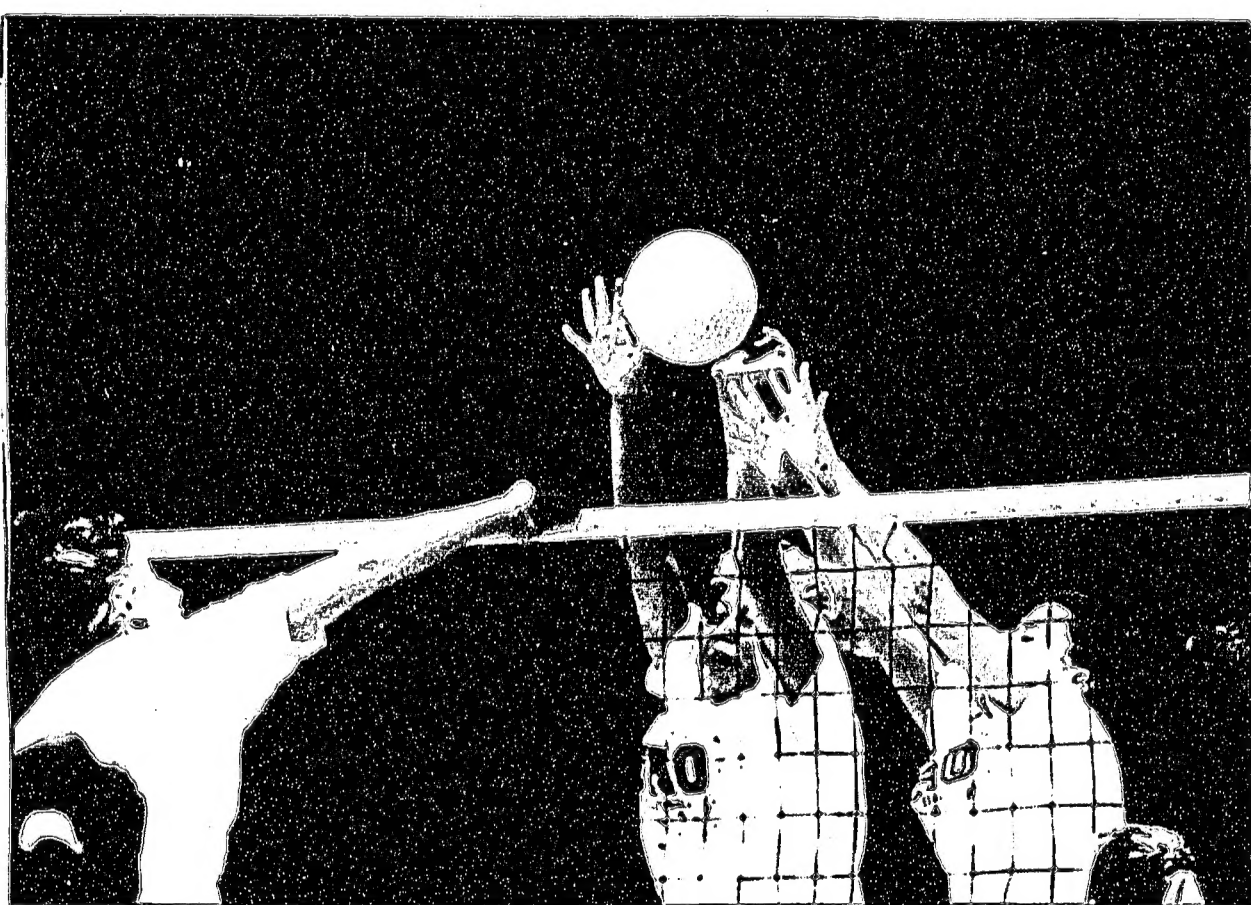

North Dakota State is ranked second, Northern Colorado is fifth and Augustana is at No. 14. Mankato State and St. Cloud State each received votes for top 25 positions.

"We would much rather play faster teams and better teams," Shires said. "We feel like our game plan is to be fast. It's much easier to be within our own game and our comfort zone when we're playing better teams."

"We're really looking forward to the conference season."

Shires said the 10-1 record and No. 13 ranking are real confidence boosters. She said the Lady Mavs' team atmosphere will keep egos deflated and keep the team focused on working hard as a team.

"I don't think they will get too cocky about the ranking. It makes every sprint we run worthwhile. It makes the really difficult times worthwhile," she said. "It's just a statement of feeling good and seeing the results from our hard work."

Shires said she hopes to maintain her team's rating through hard work, intensity and a little competition.

"We need to continue with our intensity at practice. We need to continue to push each other," she said. "We have some freshmen that are pushing for starting positions and that's making some of the sophomores and juniors work a little bit harder."

"The girls definitely want to have a great season; they know our potential now."

Huskers and Killer B are licking their wounds

By Daren Schrat

My, what a difference a week makes.

My counterpart, Lance Killer 'B' Braun took a beating last week. He should've known better. After all, who in their right mind would pick Arkansas over Alabama? The tide didn't just roll, it was a tidal wave.

There were plenty of upsets last week, but our beloved Cornhuskers were not among the spoilers. How about them Vols in Tennessee? The Florida Gators is their most recent victim. The hot date is Oct. 17 when the Vols host Alabama for what should be the Southeastern Conference title game.

Jeff Hults' Colorado Buffs just about got what they'll get against Nebraska on Halloween when they escaped Minnesota. Bill McCartney, no relation to Paul, won't be able to pull a rabbit out of his hat against a decent defensive team like the University of Nebraska-Lincoln. You all heard it here first.

Speaking of hearing it first, you all can dismiss 'B's theory that I pick the easy games. Notre Dame vs. Michigan, San Diego State vs. BYU and Tennessee vs. Georgia are not scrub games. I guess 'B' is just frustrated over last week.

Poor 'B.' He went from 95 percent to a dismal 30 in just a couple of weeks. It was just a few rookie mistakes, 'B.' you'll catch on by watching the Hit Man hit his picks again. Don't worry, the best method of learning is by watching. So, read my picks this week and learn.

DUELLING SAGES

UNO vs. Augustana
The Mavs thrive on tough games and this week will be like last week — a typical North Central Conference rumble. This time the rumble will be in the Mavs' alley and after a disappointing defeat at St. Cloud, the Mavs will be in a bad mood.

Lady Mavs sport new players at Kansas Tourney

By Scott Shiller

The UNO Lady Maverick softball team faced frustration from all directions last weekend at the Kansas University softball tournament.

First, the Lady Mavs lost their first two games, then rain forced cancellation of their final two scheduled games.

In the first game, the Lady Mavs blew a four-run lead against Creighton and went on to lose 5-4.

The following game was a 5-2 loss to host Kansas. Although the Lady Mavs lost both games, the losses came to two Division I teams, which is good learning experience, according to fifth-year Coach Mary Yori.

"Fall is a learning experience. During the fall, we just work on the basics," Yori said.

The basics will be essential to a team that returns only two seniors from last year's squad, pitcher Amy Pick and catcher Val Upenicks.

"Those two will be the leaders," Yori said.

The Lady Mavs also have new starters at all positions after losing six starters from last year. One senior starting pitcher, Amy Boyd, opted not to return for her senior season.

That leaves Pick as the lone pitcher, but last year's numbers promise a good season this spring.

"Amy's ERA was just under a one last year," said Yori. The combination of Pick at pitcher and Upenicks at catcher will anchor the team, she added.

Upon entering North Central Conference (NCC) play in the spring, Yori said her Lady Mavs should be a force to be contended with, despite their inexperience.

"We should hold our own," she said.

The Lady Mav roster does include three junior college transfers new to the team.

Junior outfielder Jennifer Neuberger, originally from Ralston, transferred from Highland Community College.

Junior third baseman Michala Lehotak, originally from Gross

High School, transferred from Indian Hills Community College along with junior first baseman Deb Baetsle, also from Indian Hills CC.

Aside from the two seniors and three transfers, the rest of the Lady Mav roster lists four freshman and four sophomores.

Coming up this weekend, the Lady Mavs will again face Division I competition in the Creighton University tournament at the Creighton Sports complex. The tournament begins Friday afternoon and ends Sunday, according to Yori.

The Lady Mavs start their play Friday against the College of Saint Mary at 4 p.m.

On Saturday, the Mavs have two morning games; at 9 a.m. against Drake and at 10 a.m. against NCC foe Augustana. The Lady Mavs then play host Creighton at 4 p.m. Sunday's games depend on the outcome of the previous day's games in the round-robin tournament.

The Lady Mavs will have an alumnae game at Claussen Westgate Field Oct. 3 at 1 p.m.
